Tesla is now selling a base model all-wheel drive Cybertruck starting at $60k, and has cut the price of its top-end Cyberbeast model to $100k, down from $115k.

The cheaper rear-drive Cybertruck option is out, so Tesla notably cuts the cost of a new Dual Motor version.

Latest news and updates on the Tesla Cybertruck, the electric pickup truck, with updates on its production, features, performance, and global availability.

Tesla has canceled the rear-wheel-drive version of the Cybertruck roughly six months after adding it to the lineup.

Tesla's Cybertruck now has a new, cheaper base model, making it more affordable than rivals like the Rivian R1T for now.

New orders for the Cybertruck will start on September 5, 2025. "Cybertruck was not 100% carryover in execution like S3XY, so it required work."
